An Early Opinion of San Joaquin.

In a work entitled "The Resources of California, published in 1850, purporting to give the result of three years experience in California prior to the year 1848, by Walter Colton, late Alcalde of Monterey, we find the following in relation to the valley of San Joaquin. Considering that this same valley is one of the richest and most productive agricultural regions of the State, the opinion of Mr. Colton is simply ridiculous; and, yet it is the same that was generally entertained by travelers and fortune-seekers of a few days, few if any of whom ever dreamed that the "Sahara" Colton mentions would, one day, be dotted over with beautiful homesteads and groaning under its fields of waving grain, or even boasting the productions of its orchards to compete successfully with all the world at the National Exhibition of 1866. Colton says:

"No furrow has ever been turned in the long valley of the San Joaquin. So far as from what I have seen, there can be little encouragement for the husbandry. The soil is poor and gravelly, the grass is meagre and sparse; even the wild horses and cattle seek its margin, as if afraid to trust themselves to the Sahara of its bosom. Near some of its bays slight evidences of fertility exist, but as a district it will never add much to the agricultural wealth of California."

Could the writer stand upon the levee of this city at the present time and witness the arrival and departure of the immense loads of wheat and other farm products of San Joaquin, he would doubtless feel about his report of San Joaquin as did Dame Partington when she said, upon being reminded of her bad memory, that she never had a mouth but she "put her foot in it."—Stockton Independent.

WARNINGS FROM THE STAGE.—The great tragedian Macready would never allow one of his daughters to enter a theatre. A recent memoir of an actress of brilliant genius, written by her daughter, states that his children were carefully kept from everything connected with the profession. "Occasionally," says she, "we were permitted to visit the theatre, but were never allowed a free access to the green room. The consequence of promiscuous plays. A son of this actor, who is himself quite distinguished in the same line, on being recently consulted by a soldier's only daughter in reference to going upon the stage, earnestly entreated her to abandon the idea, on account of the immorality of such a life. Another emigrant actor, George Vandenhoff, on quitting the profession for the bar, gave the following gratuitous advice to any "ingenuous youth" thinking of becoming an actor: "Go to sea; go to law; go to church; go to physic; go to Italy, and strike a blow for liberty; go to anything or anywhere that will give you an honest and decent livelihood, rather than go upon the stage. To any young lady with a similar proclivity, I would say, Buy a sewing machine and take in plain work first; so shall you save yourself much sorrow, bitter disappointment, secret tears."

WEALTH OF THE ANCIENTS.—Cicero possessed, in landed property, a fortune equal to £1,700,000, besides numerous slaves and furniture amounting to an equal sum. He used to say that no citizen who had not sufficient to support an army or a legion did not deserve the title of a rich man. The philosopher Seneca had a fortune of £3,500,000. Tiberius at his death left £12,634,000, which Caligula spent in twelve months. Vespasian, in ascending the throne, estimated all the expenses of the State at £35,000,000. The debts of Augustus amounted to £600,000. Cæsar, before he entered upon any office, owed the sum of £2,500,000. He had purchased the friendship of Curio for £500,000, that of Lucius Paulus for £200,000. At the time of the assassination of Julius Cæsar, Antony was in debt to the amount of £3,000,000; he owed the same sum on the Ides of March, and it was all paid by the Kalends of April. He spent £107,000,000. Apicius was a debauchery, £200,000, and finding on examination of his affairs, that he had only £80,000, poisoned himself, because he thought that sum insufficient for his maintenance. Cæsar's wife, Pompeia, the mother of Brutus, possessed the value of £10,000. Cleopatra, for entertainment she gave to Antony, dissolved in vinegar pearls worth £80,000 each, and then swallowed them successively.

BY PACIFIC TELEGRAPH!

[SPECIAL TO THE DAILY UNION VEDETTE.]

Secretary Seward Acting for the Fenian Prisoners!

The French Troops to Leave Mexico!

Important Colonizing Scheme in Lower California!

Chicago, Oct. 29.

Secretary Seward has directed our Consul at Toronto to procure a copy of the record of the trial and conviction of Lynch and McMahon, and also of all further trials and convictions of a similar character, and be has addressed Sir Frederick Bruce, the British Minister at Washington, notifying him that our Government will take the action required by the highest considerations of national dignity. Seward says to Bruce: "It would be very gratifying to the President if you should be able to give an assurance that the execution of the sentences will be suspended, if an occasion for delay [illegible] it proper to say that the offenses involved in these trials are, in their nature, eminently political. It is the opinion of this Government that a sound policy coincides with the best impulses of a benevolent nature in recommending tenderness, amnesty and forgiveness. This suggestion is made [illegible] because the same opinions were proposed to us in our recent civil war by all governments and public bodies of Europe, and by none with greater frankness and kindness than by the government and statesmen of Great Britain."

Dispatches from Toronto say that petitions are coming in demanding that no mercy be shown the Fenians and that the threats of Meade in New York, &c., to avenge the death of these prisoners, will do great injury. There are several hundred Irish Americans in Toronto, apparently without employment, and it is believed that they are there to attempt a rescue. Three more junior prisoners were arraigned on Saturday. The prisoners at Cornwall will be indicted on Monday for high treason.

Judge Wilson, in pronouncing sentence of death on Col. Lynch, last Thursday, said:

"The evidence brought to bear in Court is clear and conclusive that you were not in Canada as a newspaper reporter on the occasion charged in the indictment, but that you were armed and in some kind of command. But even if you were there as a reporter, you are not guiltless. Your object, in that case, was to encourage others to come if these men had been successful, or keep them away if a reverse had happened. Looking at the case in that light, you cannot be surprised that the law should be enforced and you suffer its penalty. You complain unjustly that those who were in command on that occasion were not allowed to come here to testify in your behalf. If the Crown had given any [illegible] of safe conduct as has been spoken of, it could not have been carried out. You have had all the justice you could possibly get. As the law now stands you might be sentenced to immediate death, but inasmuch as the law is ex post facto as to you, I shall not exercise any discretion. I may have to shorten your existence one hour. Moreover, you have a right to bring the whole case into court upon appeal, and God forbid that I should deprive you of that opportunity. The period of your execution will therefore be delayed till the end of next term."

The prisoner, Robert B. Lynch, is a native of Galway, aged 48 years, and was connected with the Quartermaster's Department at Louisville during the war. He claims to have been in Canada as a correspondent of the Louisville Journal. Before sentence of death was pronounced, he said: "I am innocent of the crime charged against me, of which I have been found guilty, and I here pledge myself before that God in whose presence I must appear some day, that I am wholly innocent."

Washington, Oct. 28.

The Mexican Minister has received dispatches from the city of Puebla, Mexico, containing the official report of a battle at Ixmiquillian, where the Belgian legion was entirely cut to pieces. Col. Vanderoessin, the Belgian commander, attacked Ixmiquillian, a place thirty leagues from the City of Mexico, defended by Mexicans, who repulsed the Belgian demonstration. The legion lost 20 officers killed on the spot. The legion retired to Tutalla, leaving their artillery in the hands of the Mexicans. The officers who survived the battle have since embarked at Vera Cruz for Belgium.

The following is a translation of a letter received here to-day:

Vera Cruz, Oct. 12—11 P. M.

The St. Maurice steamer arrived here early this evening with General Castleman on board. His instructions are to send to France, in two detachments, all troops that are here. He brings besides a message from Napoleon to Maximilian advising him to abdicate in favor of anybody he pleases, and to go home. He (Gen. Castleman) is authorized to offer Maximilian protection under the French flag with the view that he may return in safety to Miramir.

A vast concourse of nearly fifty thousand people assembled at Jones' Wood yesterday to hear James Stephens, it being understood this was his last public speech before returning to Ireland, where, he said, the blow would be struck before the beginning of the new year. He urged the Fenians in America to renewed exertions in [illegible] therhood in Ireland.

THE PLAINS.

[From the Leavenworth Times, 14th.]

The following statement regarding the plains, Indians, &c., was written by Mr. Chas. Miller, formerly City Marshal of this city. Mr. Miller has just returned from Montana, having made the trip to that Territory over the Powder River Route, returning by way of Salt Lake. The following is the statement:

Every one who has passed over the Powder River Route is convinced that the Laramie Peace Commissioners and Colonels Maynadier and Carrington are to blame for the loss of life, property and sufferings of those who have traveled that road. Almost every train that went through last fall and the year gone by way of Salt Lake, had not the men been assured by the Government officials at Laramie that the Powder River Route was perfectly safe, and that Col. Carrington was on the road with a force sufficient to protect all emigrants. The value of the assurance [illegible] testified to by the bones of many that now lay bleaching on the road. Not only that, but we have every reason to feel assured that the Indians turned upon us the very guns, powder and balls they received from the fuller at Fort Laramie, in exchange for presents given by the Peace Commissioners.

As to Col. Carrington, he can scarcely protect himself, much less the lives of travelers. Indeed it is said that Col. Carrington is commander of the post. A story is told and vouched for, that upon starting to go out with a company to fight the men interfered by the Indians, his wife threatened to pack up and go back to the States unless he returned to his quarters. Of course "Henry" couldn't stand the tender appeal, and quietly encased himself in a place perfectly safe from the "friendly" Indians.

Carrington, of course, condemns Gen. Connor for the manner in which he punishes the red devils for their outrages; forbids his troops to fire upon Indians, and takes every means to protect the "noble red man" instead of the adventurous white.

As to our trip. Three times in four hundred miles we had to beat off the Indians. When near the Yellowstone, it was thought we were out of danger, and those wagons with the largest loads struck out ahead. We were then in what is called the Crow country. A band of Arapahoes, however, had followed us, and, so soon as they discovered that the train had been divided, they attacked the weakest party and killed and scalped three. The first settlement we reached was Bozeman City, in the Gallatin valley. It is the county seat of Gallatin county, and is quite a village. The valley of the Gallatin river is beautiful, productive and thickly settled. Mr. Lyman and Mr. Toogood, old citizens of Leavenworth, are farming at the head of the valley, where the Gallatin, Madison and Jefferson rivers join and form the mighty Missouri. We followed the Missouri to within twelve miles of Helena City, and 130 miles above Fort Benton, the head of navigation.

Helena is built right in the mountains on Last Chance Gulch, one of the richest gulches in Montana. Many of its buildings are of stone, and many of them would do credit even to Leavenworth. We found Leavenworth well represented in Helena City by Messrs. James Morehead, Jas. Caldwell, Ed. Kellogg, Clay Thompson, Pritchard, Viergutz, Hemsfield, Gaston and others. Messrs. Gaston & Simpson are located in New York Gulch, where they have one of Wilson & Estes' 30-stamp mills in operation, and it is said to be by all odds the best in the country.

On the 20th of September I left Helena for Virginia City, via Holladay's Overland Express. The trail is rough, the fare $75 in gold, or $25, in greenbacks, and some nineteen hours' time are required to make the trip.

I also found a number of Leavenworth men in Virginia City, among them Tom Plummer, John McWhirt, Fred. Mork, Chas. Bittman, Wm. Phillips, and Mr. Chapin, who keeps the Planters' House.

The next morning I left for Salt Lake, 400 miles from Virginia City. Fare $75 in dust or $125 in greenbacks.

In Salt Lake City I met Milt. Orr, ex-City Marshal, who is in the banking business, also met Tom Stevens and others, who seem to be doing well among the Mormons.

On the road from Salt Lake to Denver, I overtook I. G. Luce, who is on the way in. A few days before we came along, the Stage Company had lost some stock by the Indians. Indeed the "noble red men" appear to be worse than ever, and it is feared that this winter they will prevent travel over the road unless the Government sends out some men to take the place of the old women commanding the forts in that country.

In conclusion I would state that much might be written upon the subject, and unless something is written and published to stir up the Government to active measures, many a plains traveler's scalp will ornament the belt of some poor, miserable red skin.

Galeniferous Silver Ores.

The Arizona Miner, a spirited weekly paper has the following sensible article on Silver Lead Ores. The hints thrown out are not only valuable but too true. The belt of silver mines along that range of mountains traversing Arizona, Nevada, Montana and even farther north as well as south from Arizona into Sonora in Mexico, abound in such ores. The metallurgical treatment is, however, better understood in Mexico, where special furnaces are erected for beneficiating such ores.

The silver lead ores, of which the ledges in Nevada abound, are said to be overlooked by prospectors, and attract but little attention or interest. Yet it is a well known fact that mines of argentiferous galena are among the most permanent, and in skillful hands, the best producing mines in the world. Galena ores yielding silver and a large percentage of lead, are regarded as invaluable to any silver bearing region; not only for the reason that they will of themselves produce large quantities of bullion, but that they will also furnish the skillful smelter with a principal agent for the smelting of other classes of silver and gold ores, and at least of production below the Western method of mill work. The Nye County News gives an estimate of the cost of the treatment of the ores by milling and smelting process in Nevada as follows:

To erect a good twenty-stamp mill capable of reducing fifteen to twenty tons of ore per day, with boilers all complete, will cost from $60,000 to $75,000, and when running requires the help of thirty seven men. We have allowed fifteen to twenty tons as the result of such a mill's daily work, although experience teaches us that the amount is above the daily average. The fluxes for mill process will cost more than double the amount required for smelting. The cost of putting up a sufficient number of Mexican blast-furnaces to treat an equal amount of ore, will not cost to exceed three thousand dollars and require the help of twenty-five men. The monthly difference in favor of this class of smelting furnaces, with the same capacity for the reduction of the ores as a twenty-stamp mill, will be as follows, to-wit: Difference on hired labor, $1,200; cost of fluxes, $1,700; interest on capital invested, at two per cent. per month, $4,840; total, $5,840. The number of furnaces and consequent increased power of working, can be multiplied with a comparatively small outlay of capital to meet the increased production of ores, or, in plain words, with an additional expenditure of fifteen hundred dollars, the furnaces could be increased to double the capacity, and a smelting establishment capable of reducing two hundred tons daily can be erected for a sum not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars, whereas it would require at least thirteen twenty-stamp mills, at a cost of nearly as many hundred thousand dollars, to do the same amount of work.
